The Names of those who have been
Members of the MEDICAL SOCIETY, from its institution, Nov. 26. 1737, to
May 1. 1770.

[Those gentlemen to whose names S. E. is subjoined, have been allowed the privileges of extraordinary members, from having taken a degree in medicine before leaving the society. Those marked S. H. have been admitted to the rank of honorary members, in consequence of having performed those exercises which, by the regulations of the society, are required for that purpose. Those marked S. H. with a star prefixed to their names, have had the rank of honorary members conferred upon them, as a mark of particular regard from the society. Those marked P. A. have been elected to the office of annual presidents, and officiated in that capacity during the years subjoined.]

An

An Obligation, for more effectually securing the Library of the MEDICAL SOCIETY, signed by every member upon his first admission.

1. I will be duly careful of such books belonging to the society as I shall at any time borrow from their library.

2. I will never consent to the alienation of that library, unless at such time, and in such circumstances, that, upon deliberate and unbiaſſed judgement, it ſhall appear to me that ſuch a change in the conſtitution of the ſociety will tend to its advantage and ſupport.

3. I will never enter into any meaſures for ſuch alienation, unleſs in a full and regular aſſembly of the ſociety, conſiſting of the whole ordinary members then in Edinburgh, of whom at leaſt ſixteen ſhall be of nine months ſtanding in the ſociety, and ſix ſhall be honorary members, all of them unanimouſly conſenting with me to that alienation, and giving that conſent in the winter-months, betwixt the firſt of November and firſt of May.

4. I will be careful that every perſon admitted a member of the ſociety ſhall bind himſelf in the above-written engagements; as I do, by ſigning my name to them, in preſence of the ſociety.

Abstract

Abstract of the Regulations of the MEDICAL SOCIETY relating to their Library.

1. The use of the library is confined solely to the members of the society, their secretary, and librarian.

2. Any member is allowed to borrow from the library an unlimited number of books at a time.

3. Every member borrowing books from the library shall sign a written acknowledgement of his having so done, and is answerable for such books, till they are returned, and his receipt disannulled.

4. Every member shall be allowed the use of any volume for the space of fourteen days after he receives it; but after that time is elapsed, he is obliged to give it up upon being demanded.

5. A committee is to be appointed at the first ordinary meeting of the society, every month during the winter, to examine the state of the library, and report the same to the society.

6. At the end of every session a committee is to be appointed, with powers to purchase or commission books to a certain extent, for the society's library.

7. At the beginning of every session a supplement shall be printed to the catalogue of the library, containing such additions as have been made during the course of the preceding year.

Address of the Publishers of the New Society, 1841-1842.

1. The use of the library is confined solely to the members of the Society, their families, and friends.

4. Every individual shall be allowed the use of arms.
